Summer 2011 LunchTALK introduced conversations about “race” with the documentary: “RACE MATTERS” by California Newsreel

Join us for “PLACE MATTERS”

A documentary series & public impact campaign

As Harvard’s David Williams reminds us, “Housing policy is health policy. Neighborhood improvement policies are health policies. Everything that we can do to improve the quality of life for individuals in our society has an impact on their health and is a health policy.”

Episode - Why is your street address such a good predictor of your health? Latino and Southeast Asian immigrants like Gwai Boonkeut have been moving into long-neglected urban neighborhoods such as those in Richmond, California, a predominantly Black city in the San Francisco Bay Area. Segregation and lack of access to jobs, nutritious foods, and safe, affordable housing have been harmful to the health of long-time African American residents, and now the newcomers’ health is suffering too. “Place Matters” connects the dots between health, wealth and zip codes.

New Haven Healthy Start is a program of The Community Foundation for Greater New Haven that helps pregnant women and mothers deliver healthy and happy babies. Its primary goal is to reduce the infant mortality and morbidity rate in the City of New Haven.
